2 MAN BEST BALL

THE BASICS

Teams of 2 will keep score for the opposite team at the same tee time.

You and your partner play your own golf balls on each hole. At the completion of each hole, the two of you select your lowest stroke total; that becomes your side's official score.

In stroke play, that score is added to your side's total round score.

The rules of golf do not specify a specific order of play for your side. You and your partner may play in any order you decide is best.

One important point is that, as long as one of you can post a score, the other need not even finish the hole.

Only one player has to finish the hole for your side's score to be official.

PENALTIES

For the most part, penalties follow the normal rules of golf. Because there are two players on each side, one player can be penalized without affecting the other's score.
